

Anke Engelke

Actress and Comedian, Brainpool TV

Anke Engelke was born in Montreal (Canada) in 1965.

Between 1979 and 1985, she presented, among others, the ZDF holiday program for children and the daily children's programs from the Broadcasting Trade Show. As a singer, Anke Engelke has been a member of the "Fred Kellner und die Famosen Soul Sisters" formation since 1989. She has been a member of the Sat.1 "Wochenshow" ensemble from April 1996 until May 2000.

In "Liebesluder" (Germany 2000, Detlev Buck), Anke Engelke impersonates the worthy wife Christine. In 2000, she played the lead role in "Anke – Die Comedyserie". She is the charming and witty host of a daily talk show: an amusing glance behind the scenes of the world of television. The second series was launched in May 2001.

In October 2001, Anke Engelke hosted the "German TV Award" with Hape Kerkeling. Since 1998, Anke Engelke has been representing the Christmas Gala "Danke Anke" on Sat.1, which attracts up to six million viewers. In May 2002 and 2003, she also presented the homonymous Mother's Day-Show on Sat.1.

With Olli Dittrich, Anke Engelke improvises in the ZDF-production "Blind Date" which went on air in 2001. The second episode, which took place in a cab, received the "Adolf Grimme Preis with Gold" in 2003. From 2001 to 2003, she hosted the ProSieben documentary on the award Presentation for the "Rose d'Or" in Montreux. In January 2002, she presented the first season of her new sketch comedy "Ladykracher". The second season of "Ladykracher" started already in September 2002. The "Ladykracher"-team received the "German TV Award 2002" and the "German Comedy Award 2002". Anke Engelke was awarded the "Best female comedian" for "Ladykracher" for three times. Her sketch comedy was nominated for the "International Emmy Awards" 2002 and was proposed three years in a row for the international TV-Award "Rose d'Or". The third season of "Ladykracher" was broadcasted in winter 2003 in Sat.1.

In 2004, Anke Engelke hosted the "Anke Late Night" Show in Sat.1. In 2005, she presented the award shows of "Golden Globes" and "The Academy Awards" for the German ProSieben-Viewers. In 2006, Anke Engelke went on air with "Ladyland", which was broadcasted in Sat.1 until June 2007.

Anke has been providing the German voice for Marge Simpson since January 2007. She also plays in the crime series "Kommissarin Lucas" on ZDF. In December 2007, she was presenting a wacky parody of all Christmas shows on German television named "Fröhliche Weihnachten!" (Merry Christmas!) which was awarded the „Adolf Grimme Preis“.
