

Ed Waller

Editorial Director, C21 Media

Ed Waller is a media journalist working out of London, England. He writes for trade website/magazine C21 Media, where he is editorial director, as well as regularly contributing to UK newspapers including The Guardian, The Independent and The Sunday Times. He previously worked at trade magazines Televisual Magazine and Asia-Pacific Satellite.

C21 Media

C21 Media is an international publishing company specialising in worldwide television, media, and associated business information.

C21Media.net

Our portfolio of magazines, web video series, reports, conferences and consultancy services converge in the portal C21Media.net - Home to the International Entertainment Community. We have also launched an online programme screenings site at C21screenings.net.

From first sight of new programmes in development around the world, to in-depth profiles, features and reports, the two sites are now regular portals of call for the world's content production, distribution and broadcast community, as well as being the distribution point for other C21 initiatives.

In print, Channel 21, FutureMedia and a wide variety of reports and Insider's Guides provide further resources to the international television programming community, on-air design and branding industries and related sectors, including advertising and internet business. FutureMedia also lends its name to an annual conference and workshops.

With a broad and varied portfolio, C21 Media has built a reputation as one of the most progressive independent media houses in the business. Several ongoing initiatives continue to support our growth as a most-trusted source for international TV and media business information.

Contact

C21 Media · 25 Phipp Street · London EC2A 4NP · UK

T: +44 207 613 7160

E: ed@c21media.net · www.c21media.net